

The China Journey Continues

Deep grew up in Montana. As a teenager, he spent two years in India, his father's homeland. But it is China that has found a place in his heart—especially after all that fun he had in Shanghai this summer. Ask him about the hottest card game among Chinese students these days!

This fall, Deep started grad school at Urbana-Champaign, and continues to meet students and visiting scholars from China. Recently he wrote: "Today I had lunch with a girl from Peking University ... Usually on Sunday and Wednesday evenings I am part of a study group. I've had some awesome conversations with my friends there. It's so cool..."

For summer 2008, Deep is applying to a research program that could take him to China again. We hope he will use his future career to become a bridge-builder connecting the U.S., India and China!
